Agincourt School Council is pleased to present a FREE 3-part workshop:

Interest-Based Negotiation - Effective Negotiation Skills for Parents and Children

Effective communication between parents and children involves conflict resolution. Resolving a conflict peacefully and building trust between parents and kids is possible when parents understand the root of the conflict and have knowledge of interest-based negotiation, which builds trust and self-esteem in kids. Handling conflict situations peacefully at home provides a model and establishes a culture for peaceful negotiation when kids face similar situations at school. The workshops will teach participants how to confront issues with the win-win approach.

Presenter: Katie LeMay, YOUCAN. Youth Canada Association at Saint Paul University in Ottawa is a non-profit organization that has expertise in interest-based negotiation and peacebuilding programs for young Canadians. Check out www.youcan.ca.

The first two sessions are for parents only, and will focus on understanding conflict and interest-based negotiation. The third session is for parents to attend with their child(ren). During this session, parents and kids will do activities together based on YOUCAN's 'Junior Peacebuilder' program. Please plan to attend at least the first two sessions.
